

Compass Trial — What to Expect & Your Agreement

Thank you for joining the Compass trial. Please read this page with the family member who will use the tablet, and keep a copy. It explains what Compass is, what it is not, and how we handle your information.

What Compass is

Compass is a gentle, voice-friendly companion on a tablet for an older adult — especially someone experiencing memory changes. It shows the day, the time, reminders, and reassuring messages, answers questions in a calm voice, and lets family record reminders and stay in touch.

What Compass is NOT — please read carefully

Compass is not a medical device, a safety-monitoring service, or an emergency system.

Specifically:

It will not call for help in an emergency. In any urgent situation — illness, a fall, chest pain, confusion, or danger — call 911 (or your local emergency number) directly.

Do not rely on Compass or its reminders.

Medication reminders are reminders only. They are a helpful nudge, *not a guarantee that medication is taken correctly or on time. Continue to manage medications the way you do today. Do not change any medical routine because of Compass.

It is not monitored by a person. No one is watching the tablet on the other end.

It can be wrong or unavailable. Reminders can be missed, notifications can be delayed, and the tablet needs power and internet to work.

Compass is a comfort-and-connection tool that sits alongside your normal care — never in place of it.

This is an early trial

You're helping us learn. That means:

The app is free during the trial.

You may run into bugs or rough edges. Please tell us — that's the point.

Features may change, and the trial may pause or end.

Your information & privacy

To do its job, Compass collects and stores:

- The names, medications, appointments, reminders, and reassurance messages you enter.

- Voice recordings: what your loved one says to the assistant (to understand and answer it), and any voice messages or phrases you record.

- Basic technical and usage information to keep the app working.

How it's handled:

- Information is stored securely with our service provider (Supabase) and is tied to your family's account.

- Voice is converted to text and answered using OpenAI's services; audio and text may be processed by them to provide the response.

- Only you (the family account) and the Compasse team can access your family's information. We do not sell it or use it for advertising.

- We use this information to run the trial and improve Compasse.

Recording consent

By taking part, you confirm that the family member using the tablet is aware that the assistant listens and records when they speak to it, and consents to that for the purpose of using Compasse.

Your choices

- You can stop using Compasse at any time, for any reason.

- You can ask us to delete your family's information — including voice recordings — by emailing the address below. We'll confirm when it's done.

Agreement

I've read and understood the above. I understand Compasse is not a medical or emergency device, and I will continue to rely on normal care and call 911 in emergencies.
